XLProjects (XLP)

I am proud to invite you to our home city, Bangkok!

Bangkok is the place where you will find a world of interesting international project logistics professionals and grow your projects business. Most who make the trip will fast become long-term friends and long-term project partners. And our XLProjects team is both excited and proud to be a part of that.

A bit of history, for those who didn't know...

Bangkok, and the Landmark Hotel, in particular, is the location of the very first AGM that Advanced International Networks ever held. It is where we are now headquartered and is a very popular place to visit.

Make sure to save time for your own exploration of our home city. Great nightlife and world-famous shopping abound. And there is the local culture in the form of spicy food, ancient palaces, Buddhist temples and more. And don't forget the beaches, islands, rivers, and mountains which are all just a short trip away.

We are so looking forward to welcoming everyone to the XLProjects AGM in person!

About Bangkok, Thailand

Welcome to Bangkok

A bustling multi-cultural metropolis that straddles the world famous Chao Praya river. Constantly growing and evolving whilst proudly in touch with it's history. Attracting visitors from across the world since the 15th century, this city thrives under the Thai heat and never goes to sleep.

One Night In Bangkok...

Of all Thailand's cities, Bangkok at a glance seems out of control. But stay awhile and you will begin to enjoy it. Bangkok wears many crowns. It is an epicenter, trendsetter, culinary capital, and a vibrant, multicultural and visually captivating metropolis.

The door is open 24/7 as it welcomes guests from around the world, which is why it has always been looking proudly over its civilized city, energetic Bangkokian and unbeatable dining options. Settled 230 years ago, Bangkok has never lost touch with its roots. The creation of shopping malls, high-rise buildings and unceasing innovation can't stop the city from guarding its inestimable treasures of Thai cultural heritage. Bangkok keeps its pace slow and balances the rush with majestic palaces, gleaming Buddhist temples and public parks and green spaces.

Street food in Bangkok is something that all foodies give the thumbs up for with its spectrum of flavours and mouth-watering aromas. The fine dining options are second to none with no end of upscale restaurants, rooftop bars and, of course, five-star services, which reflect the amiable and courteous manner of the Thai people.

Bangkok is a sea of temples and pagodas. Many places to visit in Bangkok are ancient ruins that remain in favor among those history lovers in the know. Starting off with Wat Pho (Temple of the Reclining Buddha), which is famed for its traditional Thai massage school and is Bangkok's oldest temple. And across the Chao Phraya River is where the Wat Arun (Temple of Dawn) located. Whoever is on the boat ride along the Chao Phraya river can't overlook its grandiosity.

Lumpini Park in Bangkok highlights the fresh and rare natural ambience of green park that city dwellers can take a rest.

The Chao Phraya river that runs through the heart of Bangkok, as indispensable part of the city, is where two prominent tourist destinations located and are listed in any Bangkok travel guide. Asiatique and Tah Maharaj are iconic shopping arenas alongside the Chao Phraya river and define how riverfront restaurants should be like. Varied in location, the two structures have one thing in common, restaurants fronting Bangkok's veritable lifeblood, the Chao Phraya river.

Bangkok as a shopping destination is hard to beat and shopping is a necessity in this Bangkok travel guide. This dense metropolis has the number of shopping outlets going along with the number of shopping hunters fighting over from elusive bargains to high-end items. Shopping is one of the things to do in Bangkok that all compulsive shoppers do not hesitate to repack and update their wardrobe.
