Welcome to Bangkok, Thailand

Bangkok is an exciting and vibrant city of over 12 million people. The greater metropolitan area of Bangkok extends for more than 32 kilometers (20 miles) in all directions. Situated in the central plains of Thailand, on the Chao Phraya River near the Gulf of Thailand, Bangkok is Thailand's administrative, economic, and cultural centre, as well as a major commercial and transportation hub for South-east Asia.

You need not travel far in Bangkok to find the trappings of modern civilization give way to historical treasures and traditional culture and heritage. A rich history, fabulous shopping, colorful night life, sumptuous food and plenty of fun. Although Bangkok, one of the largest cities in the world is crowded and fast paced, you can easily find the traditional and spiritual side at one of the many ancient temples. The city has 400 glittering Buddhist temples of great beauty, magnificent palaces, classical dance performances, numerous shopping centers, and a still functioning traditional lifestyle.

One visit to Bangkok is seldom enough. It is a city that will whet the appetite of those with an inquisitive nature and a thirst for adventure. There are unending contrasts around every corner, Bangkok is truly unique. It is not hard to get around by using the BTS Skytrain, the MRT Metro (subway, or underground), the Chao Phraya Express Boats (river buses), and the ubiquitous colorful taxis. Bangkok has a feast of attractions to offer.

After a time we find ourselves in Bangkok again. We made it through the global pandemic and are finally, finally, finally back together again! We at the network are extremely happy to see everyone again. We only hope that you all have missed one another as much as we have missed you.

Need I number all the things that have occurred since we last met - some of them still occurring? Besides the pandemic there has been the cursed global supply chain disaster that we have had to contend with. There has been a plethora of political instability in several countries all over the world and now we have to handle conducting business in the backdrop of a war that has the world on edge, with all the unpredictability and anxiety that this is causing.

But I know that we will get through these as a team.

Bangkok is, without a doubt, the home of logistics networking. It is a realization that I have come to terms with over the years. So in a broad manner of speaking, this is a homecoming, not simply for us all, but for the freight forwarding industry. For the past two years or more international freight forwarders have been in a holding pattern while at the same time it has seemed like the world, as we have known it, is completely upside down. The uncertainty looks like it will be around for a while longer. But we also intend to be around for a while longer as well. We hope that the members of our group will remain for the ride and that our business relations, contacts and colleagues will be a large part of the stability that we all need.

I strongly feel that your coming to Bangkok to reconnect is a part of what we all need now. Familiarity. Friendship. Building commerce for the benefit of everyone wherever they may be in the world. So take advantage of this time and let's build a strong chain of allies. We need to see each other through this time we are going through.

And with that I thank you from the bottom of my heart for making the trip.

Make business, but don't forget to make friends.

Gary Dale Cearley,
XLProjects' Executive Director
